Import Compliance – The burden of compliance responsibility rests with the importer!

The number of items imported into the United States is increasing every year, making it difficult - if not impossible - for U.S. Customs to ensure every shipment complies with import regulations. That's why Congress transferred legal responsibility - and - liability from Customs to importers.

As an importer, it is your company's responsibility to properly classify all imported goods, declare their correct value, pay the appropriate duties, and comply with all other import requirements. Understanding those requirements is more important than ever. Companies can face loss of goods and significant fines and other penalties for failure to comply.

Don't wait until you get a call from U.S. Customs before you evaluate your import procedures. Our experienced consultants will analyze your current import procedures and present you with a plan to address any shortcomings. We can develop import policies to enable you to establish your import compliance program utilizing reasonable care.

Training and Auditing

With the frequent changes in US import regulations, understanding the impact of these changes and the resulting affect is critical to ensuring unnecessary supply chain disruptions to your company. We offer training tailored for all levels of the organization to build awareness and understanding of the regulations and how to maintain ongoing import compliance..
